The K E N I T O R I A L

Forward . . .

“School is life! We learn to live.” Our school careers are a preparation and a training now for the lives we shall lead in the future. Many of the things we do in school we shall do later on a larger scale. In this sense, school is a miniature version of the rest of our lives. To show that parallel and likeness is the aim of our book.

Principal Roy G. Freeman; Mr. LeRoy L. Pitkin

Dedication . . .

Coupling the wisdom of experience with the fervor of youth, Principal Roy G. Freeman and Adviser LeRoy L. Pitkin have been an inspiring team for the senior class. Together they have helped to forward the work of this group.

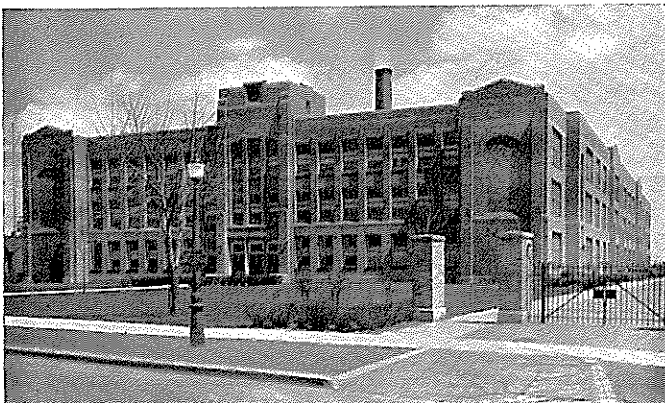

Mr. Freeman, as the school administrator, has guided the students' official activities, whereas Mr. Pitkin has led the senior class in its many extra-curricular activities, including the carnival.

In appreciation of their sincere efforts in our behalf, we, the senior class, dedicate the 1938 "Kenitorial" to them.

Administration

BECAUSE of their constant guidance and vigilance over those who yearly pass through their hands, the administration and faculty exert a profound influence upon the molding of those thoughts and ideals which determine the future character and personality of the individual students.

The Board of Education is the policy-making body of the entire Kenmore school system, while the administrators affect the lives of the students more directly through their supervision of the school's activities.

Proving that guiding and instructing students is not their only interest, members of the Kenmore High School faculty this year presented as their annual play, "The Royal Family." Proceeds of the production, which was directed by Miss Eve Strong, went to the P. T. A.

Faculty meetings, held from time to time, provide discussions of the various activities of the students, while departments also gather separately to consider new methods of teaching.

Senior Play...

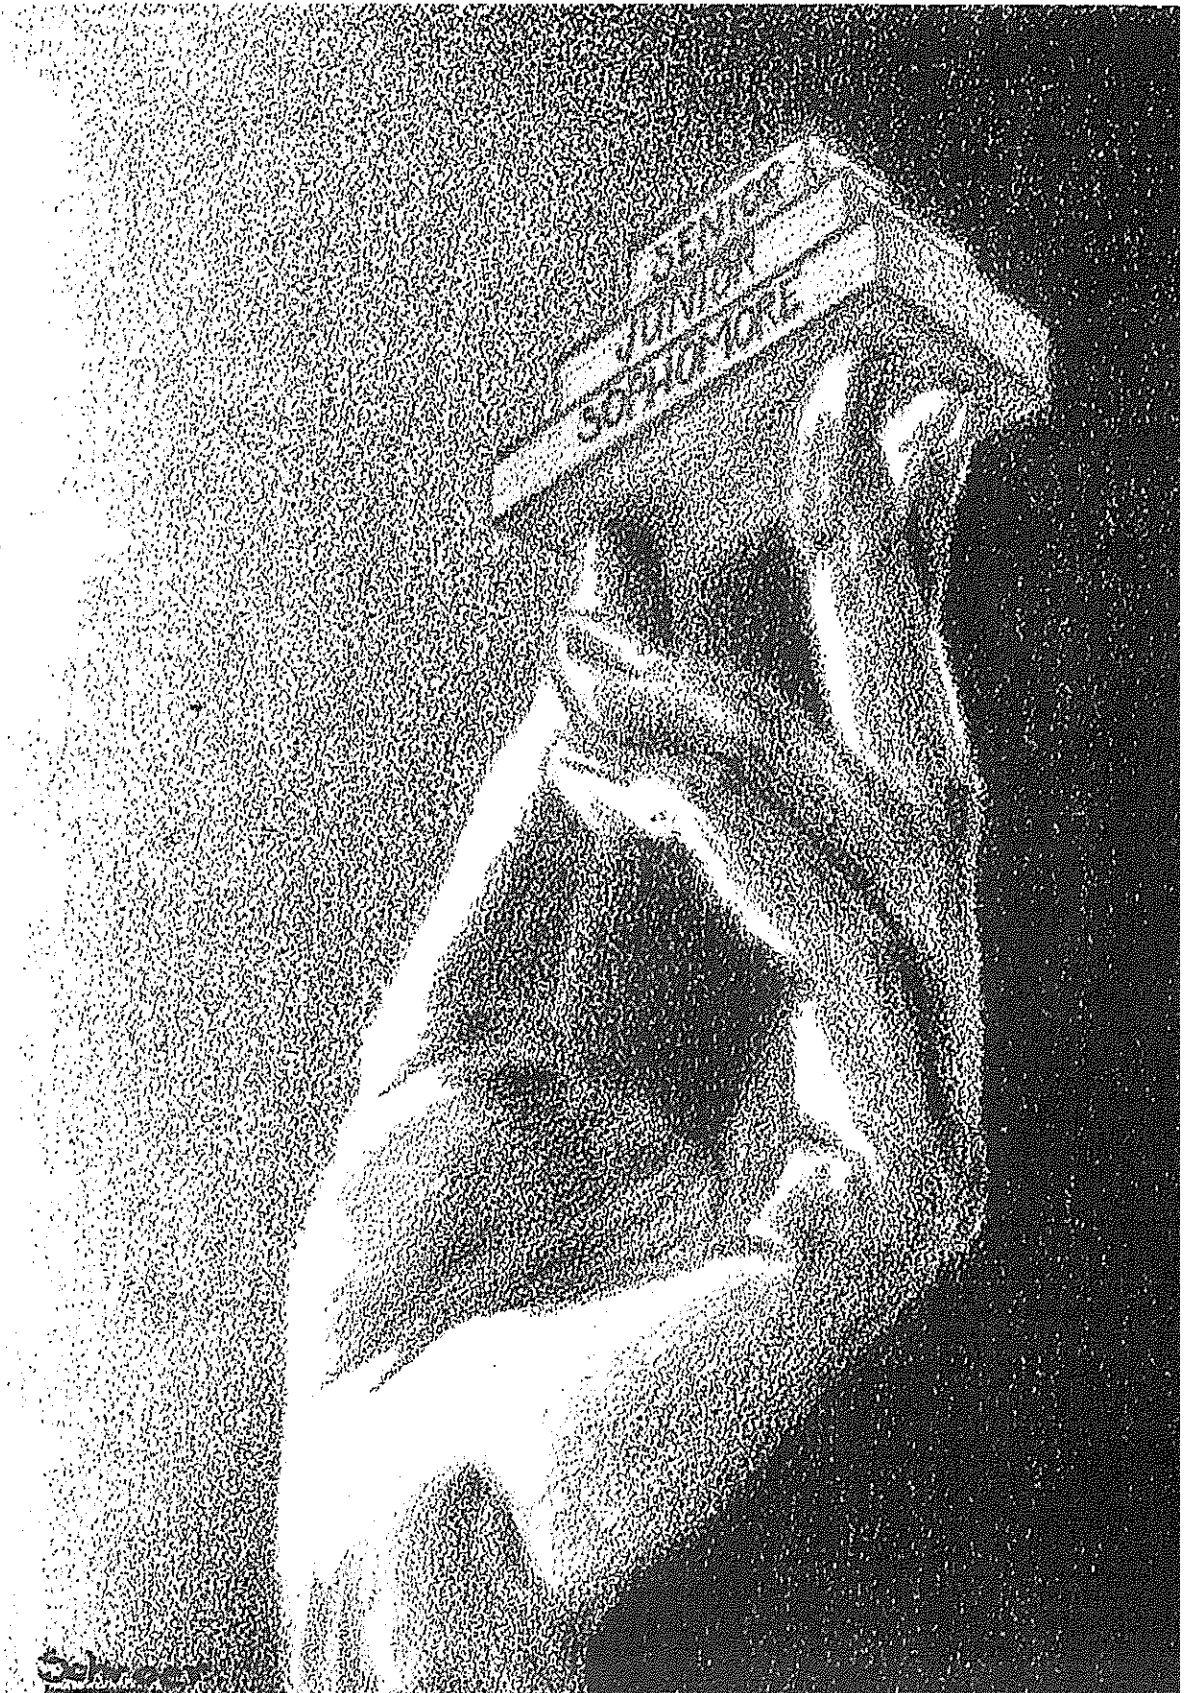

This year's senior play was "Spring Dance," by Philip Barry, a collegiate romance highly praised when played in New York. An all-senior cast of thirteen presented it here in one matinee and two evening performances, April 6, 7, and 8.

The three-act drama, centered at a New England girls' college, concerned the efforts of a student to restrain her beloved but reluctant wooer from leaving her to embark on a two-year trip around the world.

Under the direction of Miss Eve Strong, the girls of the cast portrayed the college students' loyalty to each other.

Classes

WITH each having as its aim the advancement of the whole student body, sophomore, junior, and senior classes work together to promote a spirit of general cooperation, respect, and loyalty which must prevail throughout the entire school in order to insure unity, strength, and efficiency.

CLASSES

Leading the activities of the senior class, the senior officers helped with the presentation of the senior play and managed the senior carnival. The senior class, by its senior gift, helped to finance the new amplification system recently installed in the high school auditorium.

The officers, together with the class adviser, Mr. Leroy Pitkin, arranged the details of the graduation banquet and dance, the senior gift to the school, and the commencement exercises.

R. Weber; J. Ackerman; B. Dodd;
Mr. L. L. Pitkin.

True Sons and Daughters We Will Ever Be

Today we've reached the aim of four full high school years;
And as we stand in caps and gowns, full of joy and pride,
Our pleasant thoughts bring sad ones to our minds;
We seem to feel a sad, deep pang inside.

We celebrate our learning this Commencement Day.
Commencement means to leave the old and start the new.
We leave the old, our school, with much regret;
Our preparation for the new is through.

We chose the fields we'd like to conquer in our lives;
Success is far but you have helped us on our way.
Each question learned, the answers in our minds,
We go to meet Dame Fortune on this day.

Tomorrow we will walk our separate chosen paths;
We leave our friends, our school, and old familiar lanes,
For we have reached the parting of the ways
And go to travel life's uncharted plains.

And now, dear friends and comrades, we must say farewell,
But memories of these years will always be so clear,
That though we travel many separate ways,
We'll meet again in memory through the years.

Yes, we were happy, for we found much pleasure here,
And now it grieves us much to say farewell to thee.
Oh Alma Mater, though we travel far,
True sons and daughters we will ever be.

—Dorothy Butler

... Class Poem

Dorothy Butler

Shakespeare has said, "All the world's a stage and all the men and women merely players." Taking Kenmore High School for the setting, the senior class as the cast, and "Doc" Freeman as the director, let us recall the outstanding incidents of the play, "High School Days."

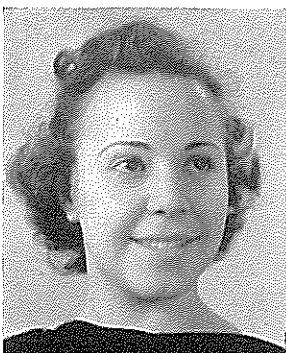

The first curtain rises on a round of parties and dances which the full-fledged senior high school students now deem it their pleasure to enjoy. New schedules are begun and new programs of extra-curricular activities are followed. Hastening the fleeting months, new acquaintances are formed and sports events shaped. May finds us working busily to be able to present the sophomore assembly which represented a courtroom scene. The year soon passes, finding us confronted with intermission, our summer vacation.

After the summer intermission, curtain two is drawn back to reveal a year highly colored by social events. Chosen to help us with better organization and greater understanding of our school are Mr. Theodore Siekmann, adviser; Al Corti, president; Roy Weber, vice president; Rhoda Anne Duddleston, secretary; Harry Richards, treasurer; and Jane Ackerman, student council representative. As spring approaches, the juniors follow the usual custom of having a junior assembly, copying a night club this time for the event. Act two is climaxed by the Junior Prom, with William Dippert and Rhoda Anne Duddleston reigning as king and queen. Robert Dodd, who is prom chairman, also supervises the decorations which follow a true coronation.

We finally begin the last act of this play as true seniors. Thrilled by our standing, we plunge whole-heartedly into the task of making the Senior Carnival a huge success. Norm Zittel presides as Carnival Queen and also acts as committee chairman together with Al Corti. Under the tutelage of Mr. Pitkin, and with the help of Norma Zittel as president, Roy Weber as vice president, Harry Richards as secretary, Jane Ackerman as treasurer, Robert Dodd as council representative, and Benjamin Banta as student council president, we struggle valiantly onward to begin our work on "The Kenitorial." Mr. C. R. Vosburgh, Jeanne Thompson, Al Corti, Dick Lane and Bob Gordon supervise our task. Along with our work on "The Kenitorial," we begin production of a play within a play, "Spring Dance." Rhoda Anne Duddleston and John Sterling, along with a fine supporting cast, make outstanding appearances. Class Day arrives and, with its arrival, we feel a sharp twinge of regret when we realize how short an interval remains before we must return our books and papers forever to Kenmore High School.

Now the lights grow dim, the auditorium is hushed while all our parents and friends join in our first great triumph, Graduation Night. The last curtain goes down, and we leave our Alma Mater to establish our imprints in the hall of life. Although we have left, we shall not forget our friends and teachers. We have had fun, but also we worked hard to attain the wisdom and experience which graduates require. So now we say farewell and thank you for the start which you have given us. You have done your best; now it depends on us.

DOROTHY WREN "Do-Do"
A 'Dot' with a dash.

Having finally arrived at the end of four hectic but enjoyable years of high school education, we, the graduating class of 1938, of Kenmore High School, in the county of Erie, the State of New York, U. S. A., are about to pass out of this sphere of education into the world beyond.

However, before taking this last drastic step, being of sound mind and memory, although somewhat crammed in readiness for the rapidly-approaching June regents, we do hereby make and publish this, our last will and testament, bequeathing our property to the present junior and sophomore classes in the following manner:

To some unfortunate student struggling through math, we leave Ruth Parson's most cheerful smile and Arthur Karnuth's ability in that line. Melvin Ehnes relinquishes his reputation as the biggest flirt to someone ambitious in that field. To both the junior and sophomore classes, we leave the knowledge of science, English, Latin, French, etc., carried in the heads of Muriel Payne and Cameron Lewis.

Al Corti releases his hold on his "biggest line" in order to pass it on to someone who may have occasion to use it to produce laughs in future assemblies. We leave to some junior girl who desires popularity and distinction, the all-around ability of Norma Zittel, our popular senior class president.

To those juniors theatrically inclined, we leave the talent of Rhoda Anne Duddleston to be divided as seen fit. Dick Lane leaves his troubles as basketball manager to some ambitious junior. Apply early. To encourage the would-be artists of the junior and sophomore classes, we leave some of the plates from the laboring brushes of Jean Parkes, Jean Neuman, Carl Simon, and Bob Dodd.

Harvey Berg leaves his ability to baffle Professor Quiz by passing on his unsurpassable knowledge of local statistics as to the number of schools in the township, area of Kenmore in square miles, etc.

We give and bequeath to some capable junior the job of editor-in-chief of The Rostrum. May he possess the same qualities as Charles Barton has. To some luckless victims, we leave, with much relief, those long detention periods, lengthened this year by twenty minutes, which we spent for over-sleeping in the morning.

To the feminine members of the junior class who will vie for honors next year, Lorraine Sahli leaves her titles as "Best Dressed and Best Looking Senior Girl." To the male members, Bill Dippert leaves his titles as "Best Looking and Best Dressed Senior Boy."

Besides these we leave the following to anyone who might qualify:

Jack McKinney's "wagging," Jane Ackerman's cheerful disposition, Dick Kratzer's skill in swimming, Jean Bruso's tripping the light fantastic, Phyllis Tonkin's taste in clothes, Bob Mason's tennis playing, Patience Elston's poise, Edna Smith's candy selling, Thomas Banigan's oratorical skill, John Sterling's love-making, and Jack Hensel's ability to talk like Donald Duck.

Having thus made publicly known our last desires, we hope that there will be enough of our property to cover everything sufficiently. In case of a shortage, we heartily recommend arbitration.

In witness, whereof, I, the testator for the 1938 class of Kenmore Senior High School, have hereunto annexed my name, this eleventh day of April, year of our Lord one thousand, nine hundred and thirty-eight.

CLASSES

By Robert Mason and Nelson Pierce

As the class prophecy, we shall read you an extract from the Kenmore Independent Record, now under the ownership of Harold Bock and produced under the efficient direction of Al Corti, for the week of February 8, 1958, which gives an account of the experiences of your prophets during their stay in Kenmore, while attending the reunion of the Senior Class of '38.

Quote: "Not having seen our home town for a number of years, we left the bus at the city line and began to walk up Delaware Avenue so as to see better how the village, now a city, had changed. We saw little of interest until we arrived at the vicinity of Knowlton Avenue, where we encountered someone whom we thought looked familiar. Ah yes!—it was Beverly June, who always had wanted to be a school teacher, taking the Washington School kindergarten out for its daily walk.

Continuing down the avenue, we saw such sights as Ray Debo expounding upon the qualities of a paint brush he was trying to sell to Mary Koebel in a paint store run by Ed Steward; Dick Kratzer and Odilia Koepp talking to a real estate agent; and Bill Maloney and Tom Banigan, who had become members of the local police department.

Finally, we arrived at Hotel Kenmore, latest enterprise of Cameron Lewis, local financier. Behind a large pair of horn-rimmed glasses we found the clerk—Bill Dippert, who assigned us a room. Among the people in the lobby we noticed bell hops Bob Hessler and Don Semler, and a suspicious looking gentleman who later turned out to be the house detective—John Demchik.

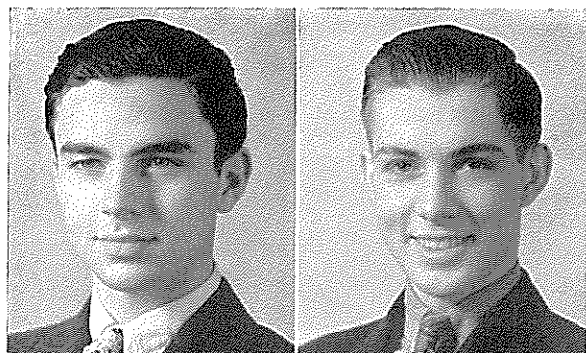

That evening we attended the basketball game between Kenmore and Lackawanna at the school gym. To our immense surprise, we discovered that Kenmore's two star players were Roy Weber and Clare Schneider, Jr. Under the skillful coaching of Bill Hennigar and Gerald VanDewater the home team proved victorious.

Afterwards, while talking to referees Art Karnuth and Ted Krehbiel, we learned that Agnes Bard, Don Colby, Mary Brown, and Vivian Keast were faculty members at the high school headed by Tom Sweeney while Olive Emore, Margaret Morton, and William Reiman were following the same vocation in other schools.

The next morning, after getting a good night's sleep, we went down to the hotel's dining room where we met Ruth Hanrahan and Jane Givens—waitresses. Finishing breakfast, we entered a nearby barber shop where we found barbers Dan Hunt, Bob Kirkwood, and manicurist Anne Logan.

As this was the day of the aforementioned reunion, the class began to assemble at the designated time and place where the different members were greeted by the welcoming committee which was composed of Letitia Young, Aileene Pettis, Dorothy Butler, Dot Stauch, Dave Jones, and Bob Frost.

Activities of the day included welcoming addresses by two of our former officers—Norma Zittel and Jane Ackerman, speeches by Mayor Richard Lane, Antarctic explorer Stephen Fitchijian, and a violin solo by Walter Hagen, conductor of the Philadelphia Philharmonic orchestra, who was accompanied at the piano by Ruth Hendler.

Robert Mason and Nelson Pierce

The class then adjourned to Atkinson's Grill for a light luncheon where Phyllis Tonkin acted as dietician and Earl Olson and Jack McKinney as chefs. Afterward at the school, a lecture was given by Leo Hagerty, noted lawyer, on the "Crime of Reckless Driving," or the reason why Jack Hensel and Al Chilcott were unable to attend the class reunion. Following this, Warner Bros.' star dance team, Harry Richards and Jeanne Bruso, offered an exhibition of a modern dance to the sophisticated "swing" of Dee Chase and his orchestra.

This concluded the program and the meeting adjourned so that everyone might recuperate for the reunion finale which was to be held at the Club Elito, one of Kenmore's most exclusive night spots, owned and organized entirely under the direction of Edwin Bury and Paul Wisler.

Arriving at the club, we found the doorman to be none other than John Sealander. Our coats were checked by Doris Penfold and Joyce Fielden, after which we were shown to our tables by Melvin Ehnes. Dinner music was furnished by John Stone and his all-girl orchestra in which were Betty Rossney, Mary Courter, Frances Larsen, Dot Werner, and Esther Gunderesen, who was the drummer.

The entertainment for the evening was furnished almost entirely by our old classmates. This included comedy by Harvey Berg and his stooges Banta and Fugitt; La Belle Duddleston, torch singer, acrobatic dancing by Fred Wendling and Ruth Parsons; and an exhibition by Bob Schultz and his troupe of trained fleas.

Charles Barton, head waiter, pointed out several of our former classmates who were now nationally-known figures, such as Ted Bowling and Don Quinn who, as heads of the Eastern Bread Company, had become the biggest loafers in the country; Robert Dodd, who has been doing pretty well selling cartoons to "Esquire" magazine; Anne Bogner, latest "umph" girl of the screen; Betty Hoadley, the Sarah Bernhardt of the modern stage; and Bud Michael, light weight boxing champ of the world.

Others in the audience included the women's open golf champion, Lorraine Voisinet; the proverbial millionaire play boy, Jack Dory; Bob Eves, sportsman aviator; Jeanne Thompson, who had just broken the world's 100-yard free style swimming record; and Mrs. Robin Hood—Beverly Frost.

Coincidental excitement was furnished by John Sterling who tripped over George Murphy's feet and spilled a tray of soup down Betty Doyle's back. Robert Gordon, U. S. senator from New York, gave the farewell address which concluded sixteen hours of class reunion which we shall never forget."

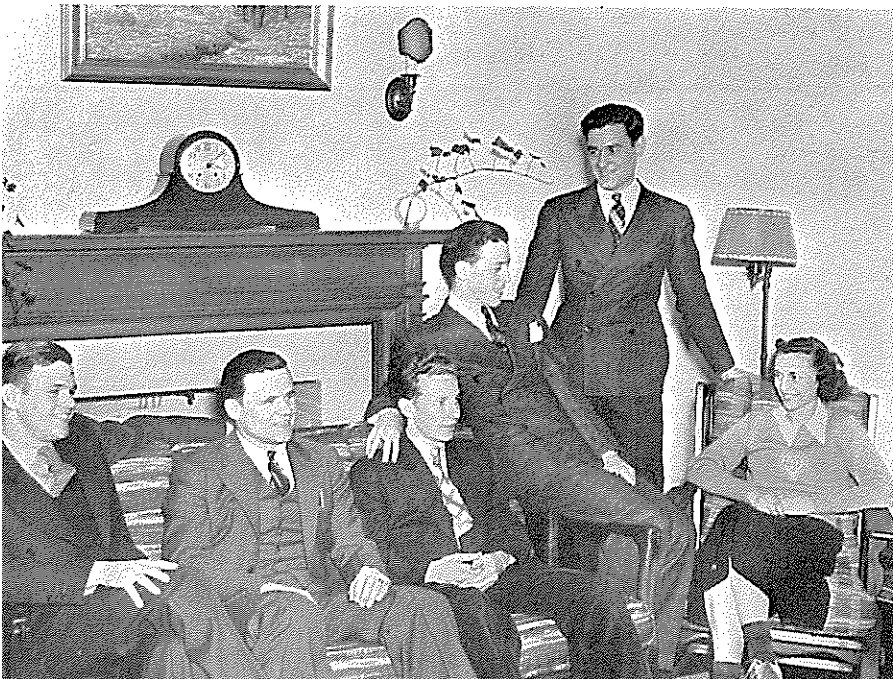

—Robert Mason and Nelson Pierce

A May assembly featuring class talent and a class day in June were planned by the Junior Class. During the class day, and at the "Prom" that evening, a king and queen chosen from this class were to preside.

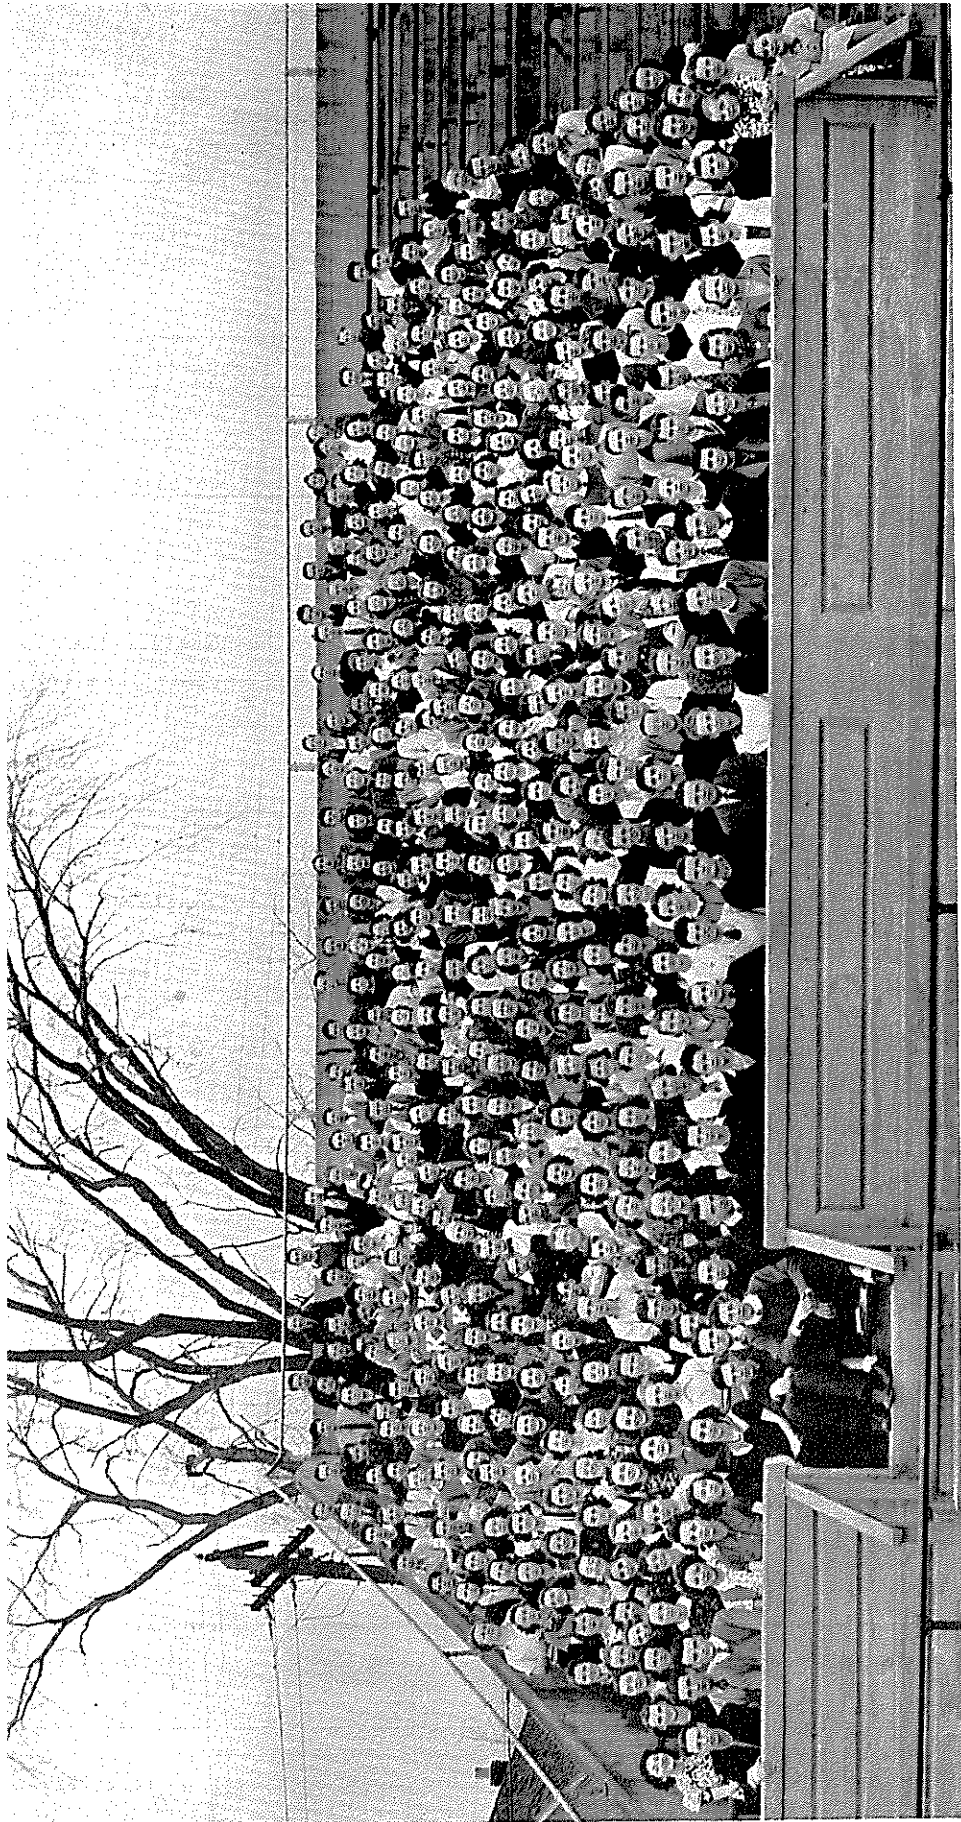

At the end of its sophomore year, this year's junior class presented a musical comedy, "Hospital Hectics," and later held a picnic at Ellicott Creek Park under the supervision of Mr. George Barna, the 1936-1937 adviser.

This year, the entire junior class was photographed in a group for "The Kenitorial," a practice which had been discontinued several years ago. Also, juniors, as well as sophomores, were permitted to work on "The Kenitorial" this year.

CLASSES

The sophomore class this year held two theatre parties, both of which starred Sonja Henie and were financial successes. Proceeds from the first financed the sophomore class assembly, and proceeds from the second went for the sophomore picnic.

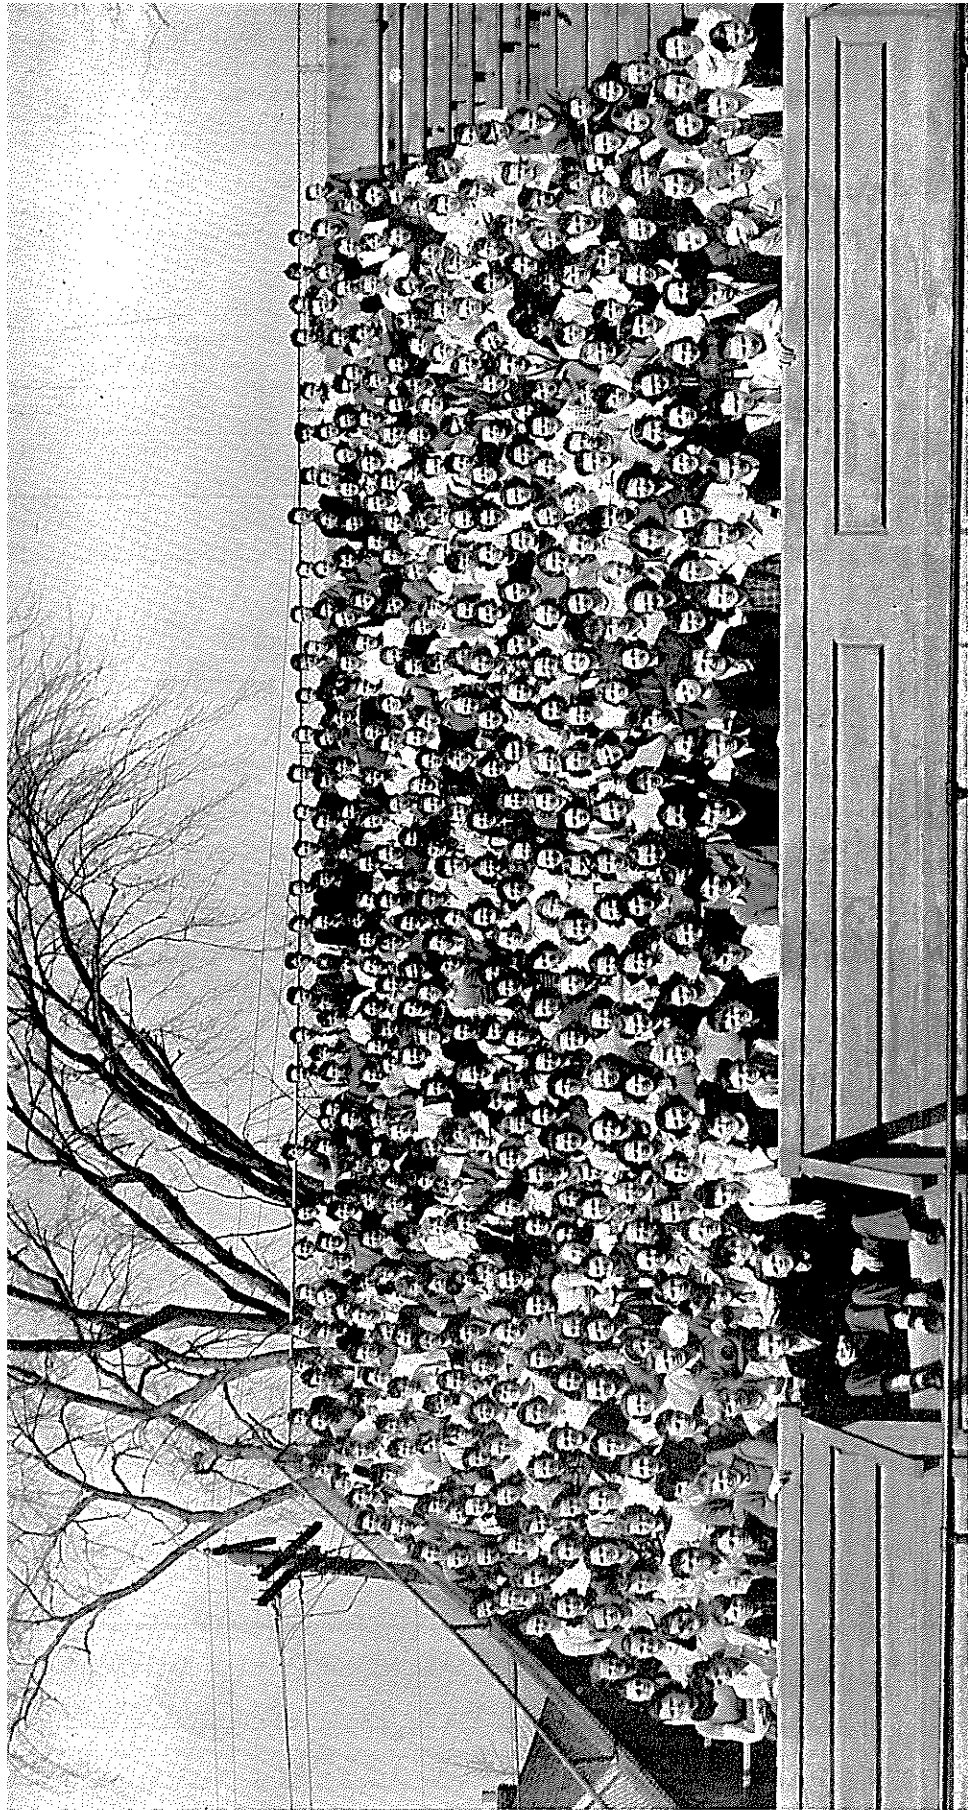

The residue from these funds plus the profits from two theatre parties planned for next year may enable every member of this class to attend the 1939 Junior Prom free of charge. This will be a unique achievement in the history of the school.

Thus, although last year's sophomore class set a high standard, this year's class equalled its achievements. The success of the class was attributed to the work of the officers together with Mr. George Barna, adviser of the last three years' sophomore groups.

School is Life

IN seeking to create a fusion point between youth and maturity, modern education reproduces in miniature the responsibilities, relationships, pleasures, and problems which comprise the adult world, thus evolving a parallel between academic activities and future living.

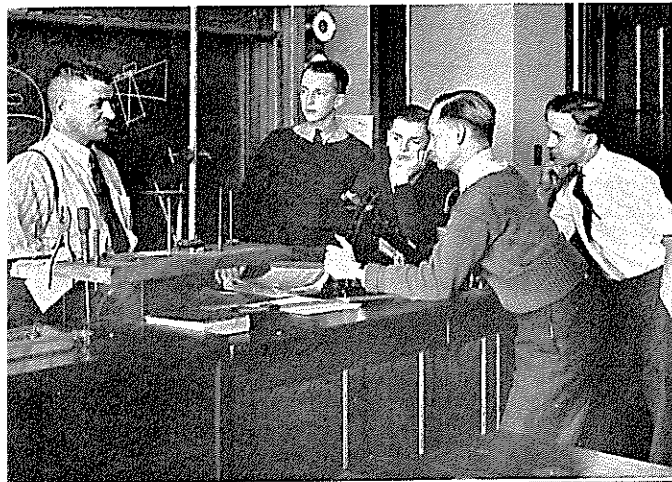

School is Life...

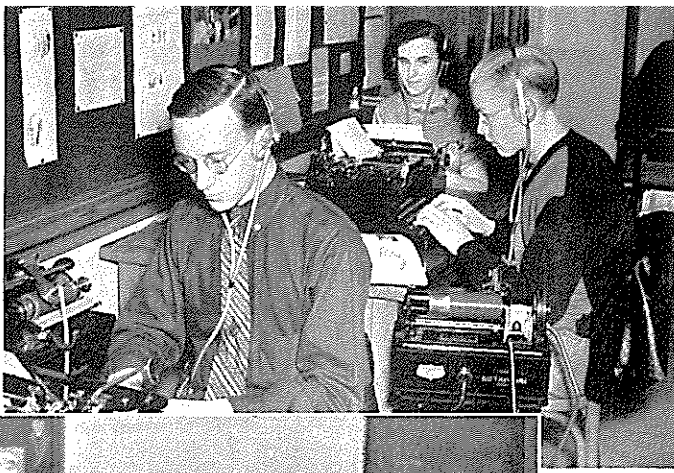

1. Corridor "jam session."
2. Rippling rhythm . . . in school, as in life courtesy is paramount.
3. High finance . . . "Can I afford sauce too?"
4. Senior projects . . . a lesson in perseverance

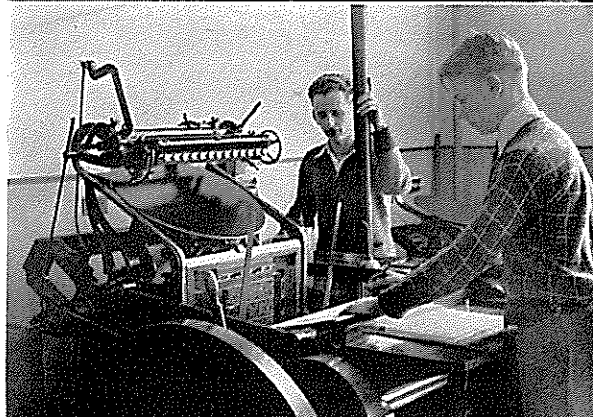

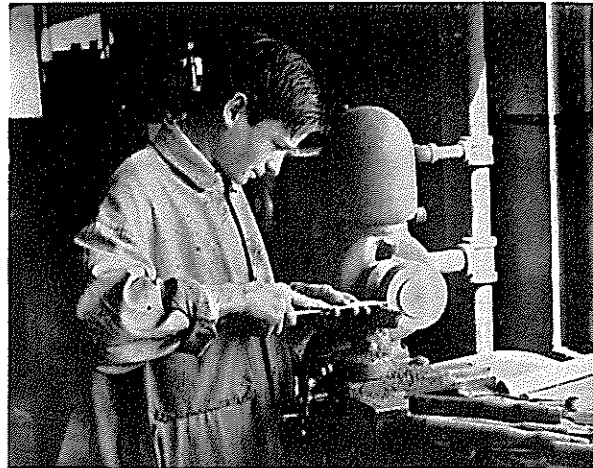

5. Acquiring musical tastes for tomorrow's leisure.
6. A Menuhin in the making!
7. "You've got to show me . . ."
8. Vocation and avocation . . . the library provides both.

School is Life...

- 9. Potential efficiency experts.
- 10. Preventive measures . . . a lesson in kitchen technique.
- 11. Concentration today—promotion tomorrow.
- 12. News in the making!

14. Girls' gym 3:30 . . . the eye witness.

15. Senior class meeting . . . a study in smiles.

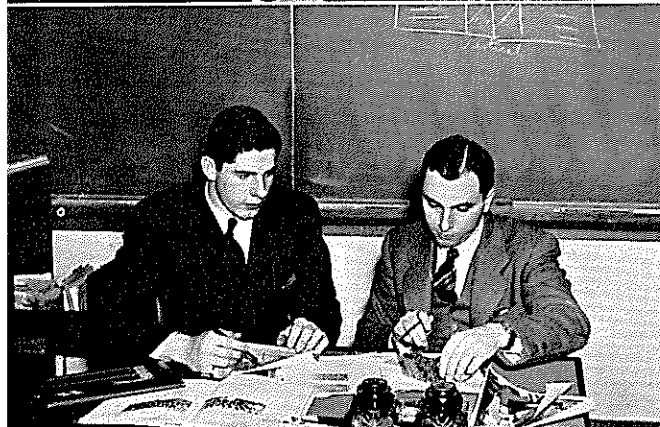

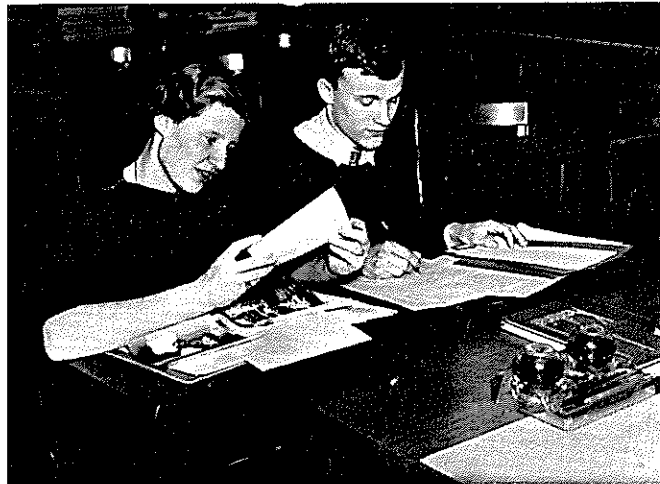

Dodd

Editors-in-chief Jeanne Thompson and Al Corti planned the book and assigned stories.

Business managers Bob Gordon and Dick Lane handled the subscription campaign, and solicited advertising.

Clare Schneider and faculty adviser Clarence Vosburgh supervised the club pictures and candid shots.

Kenitorial Chiefs

Deserving of praise was this year's staff of The Kenitorial, which obtained new and better ideas from as far away as California.

After the successful subscription campaign handled by Richard Lane and Robert Gordon, business managers, there remained the problem of soliciting advertising. By dint of hard work, revenue from this source reached a higher total than last year.

To artist Dick Davis goes most of the credit for devising an entirely new style layout for the book. Departing from the more conventional formal balance style, this year's book was designed along modernistic lines, following the current trend.

Assisting Dick Davis was Inez Cimador, while students in Miss Jeanette Underwood's art classes designed division pages. They and photography manager Clare Schneider worked to show by drawings and by photographs how school affects our future lives.

Editors-in-chief Al Corti and Jeanne Thompson supervised the various staffs to complete all editorial planning, writing, and editing, with the goal of a better book continually in mind.

Dramatic Club

To sponsor plays and promote interest in dramatics are the major aims of Kenmore High School Dramatic Club, Mask and Wig. As its annual production, the Club presented "Icebound".

For the second time the Club entered the Little Theatre Tournament at Ithaca, New York. The play this year was "Shall We Join the Ladies?" It was written by Sir James Matthew Barrie.

At its showing in the assembly here, the Ithaca play was well received by the Student Body, who appreciated the actors' attempt at a higher class of drama.

Entering the Western New York Music Festival at Fredonia the "A" Band won second place in Class "A" competition, while its soloists each received a high rating. At the beginning of the year, the band won a trophy in the Buffalo Junior Firemen's parade.

The band's activities for the first semester also included participating in the Erie County Fair, playing at the home football games, and appearing in assembly concerts. In the second semester, it presented a concert at the Harding School and participated in Kenmore's "International Concert."

Toward the end of the year, the band presented selections from Verdi's opera, "Il Trovatore," before the student body, gave a publicity concert, participated in the Memorial Day Parade, and conducted the annual concert to finance its future undertakings.

... Girls' Lit Club

By using the theme "Post-war American Literature" as the subject for its programs for the past year, the Girls' Literary Club attempted to encourage appreciation of the better types of modern literature.

In December Miss Eve Strong gave several readings from current plays, among them "Of Mice and Men" and "Journey's End." In April Mrs. Gertrude Chittenden presented a survey of some of the works of Sinclair Lewis, noted American satirist, while club members presented skits from "Main Street."

A sketch of the life of Edna St. Vincent Millay, coupled with the reading of one of her poems, "Renascence," was a feature of the March meeting. In November Miss Frances Hepinstall reviewed "Northwest Passage," by Kenneth Roberts.

... Kenmore on the Gridiron

Continuing the tricky style of offensive play inaugurated during the 1936 season, the Kenmore High School football team went through a season of three victories against five defeats.

Kenmore was continually the victim of hard luck, and the scores of several of the games are no indicative of the fine team that carried the Blue and White colors, for they lost games to Nichols Lockport, and Niagara Falls as a result of bad breaks in the closing minutes of play.

In spite of the fact that the Blue and White lost to our traditional Tonawanda rivals, the squad showed a fighting spirit in scoring two touchdowns in the last half after being submerged by the early Tonawanda scores.

Finishing the season with a record of four wins and ten losses, the 1938 Blue and White's basketball hopes failed to show improvement over the previous season.

Kenmore was able to defeat Batavia twice, while Niagara Falls, North Tonawanda, Tonawanda, and Lackawanna showed two victories over Kenmore.

Elimination of the center jump brought about a new and faster style of play, and as a result more men saw action. Because of graduation, the team will lose in June: Hennigar, Colby, Wisler, Swierczynski, and Quinn.

Track . . .

Under the direction of Coach Wesley Snyder, the 1937 Kenmore High School track team had an excellent season with few mishaps.

Important accomplishments of the Blue and White cinder squad include: first place in the mile at the Western New York Zone Meet, Paul Wisler; first place in 220-yard dash at the Western New York Zone Meet, John Kibby; winners of two cups at the Zone Meet and at Lockport; the relay team of John Kibby, Jack Hensel, Clare Popalisky, and George Cochern.

Kenmore placed second at the Zone Meet and at Lockport. They succeeded in winning at Batavia and in defeating Lockport and Tonawanda on the local track.

Kenmore's first undefeated 160-yard relay team set a new record of 1:22.4 at North Tonawanda this season while Dick Kratzer lowered the 100-yard free style record with a mark of 55.8 seconds.

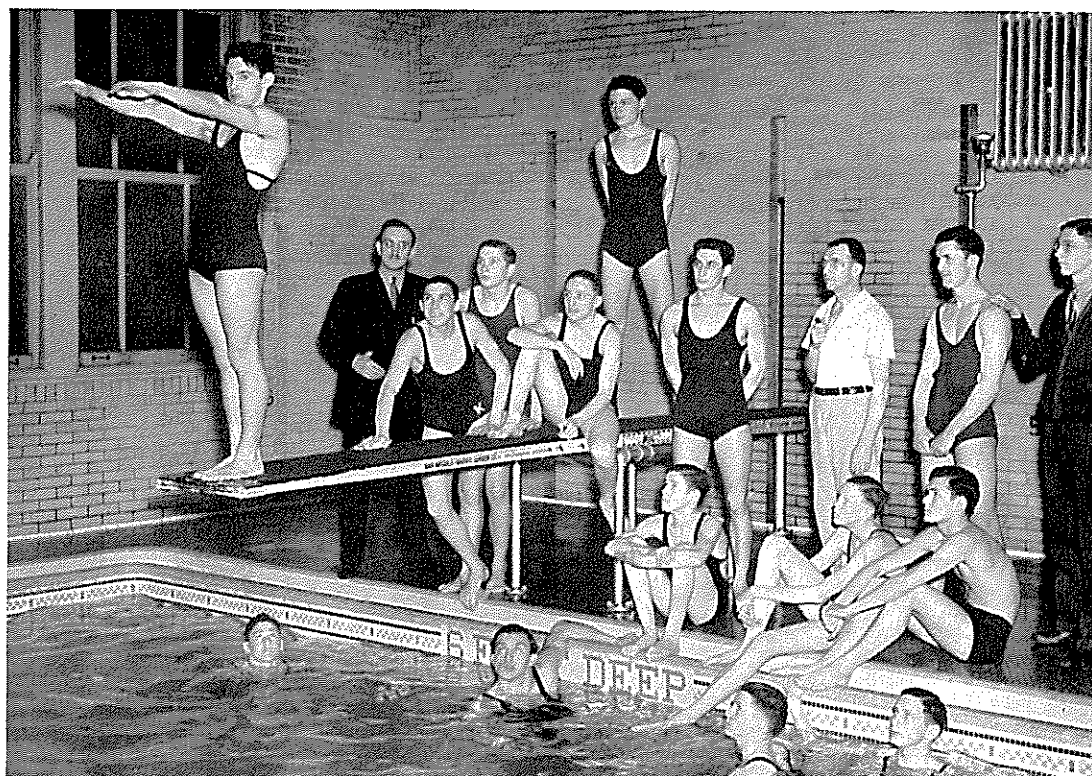

In the finals of the newly-formed Western New York Swimming League, Kenmore succeeded in placing second with 25 points. By one man's swimming outside his lane, the 180-yard relayers were disqualified, and the chances for a Kenmore first place were doomed.

Tennis

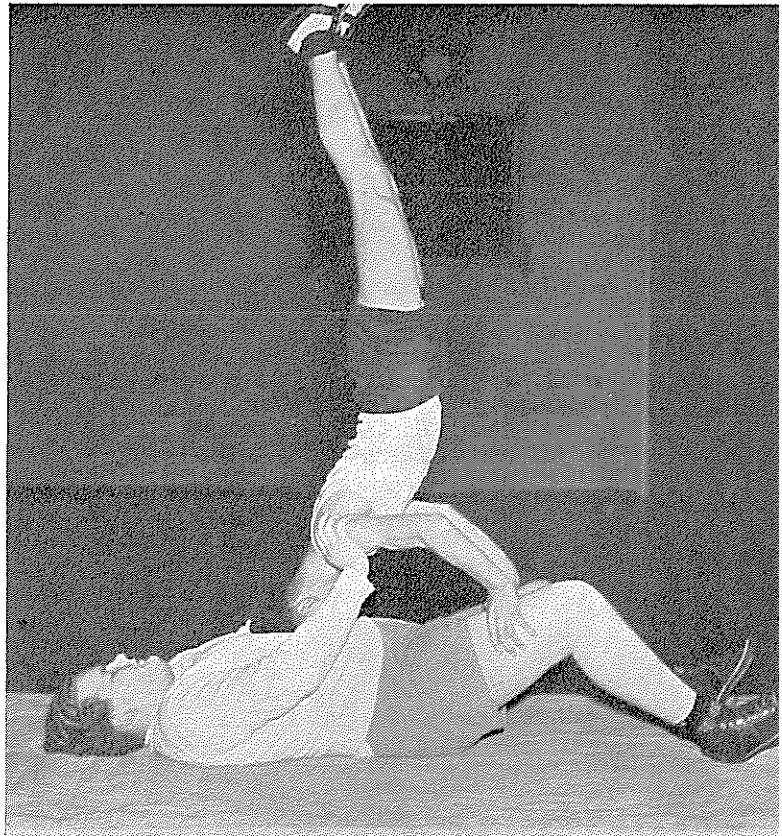

By stressing a program of intramural athletic activities for all, the Kenmore school system hopes not only to build the physical side of the student but also to encourage a spirit of good sportsmanship and cooperation.

Although interscholastic sports are heartily encouraged, intramural athletics, with their opportunities for reaching a much larger group of students, play an equally important part in the program of high school sports.

Intramural Basketball...

Introduced for the first time this year, intramural basketball has been coached by LeRoy Pitkin, Earl Ruckman, and Henry Nadin in order to allow more students to participate in sports. Some of the 150 boys taking part will someday provide seasoned material for the regular varsity team.

Intramural Football...

Judging from the results of Kenmore's 1937 intramural football team, it will someday compose a strong regular eleven. The intramural football squad, coached by Frederick Grefe, is not only to find material for future teams but also to give more boys the opportunity of playing.

First Row: Hopkins; Malucci; Carver; Landel; Michael; Coleman; Baker; Bowman; Brown
Second Row: Sticht; Stevens; Otto; Warren; Langenbeck; Kirst; Williams; Hagerty; Sweeney
Third Row: Cameron; Weisbeck; Foley; Glor; McKay; Ebling; Monroe; Stroebel; F. Grefe, coach

As the season opens, a kick-off and a cheer go into the air simultaneously, spurring on the Blue and White. Throughout the sport seasons the cheerleaders are on their toes to lead the supporters of Kenmore teams.

The cheerleaders have many other duties. This year, again cooperating with the student council, they presented a period-long pep assembly. The boys of the squad wore royal blue trousers to the games this year.

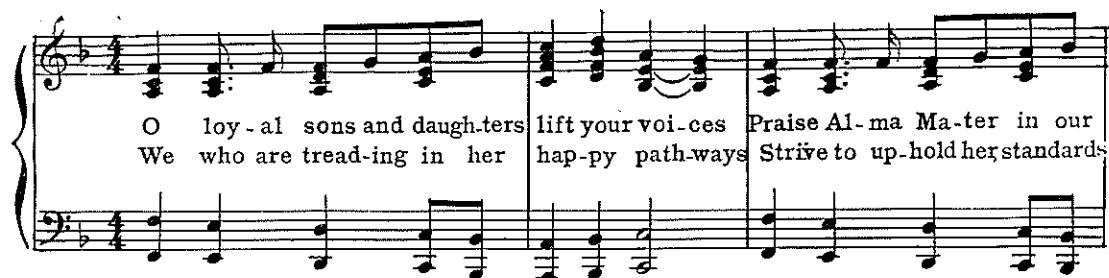

At an assembly held near the end of the year Dorigen Ditsch, Mary Hamilton, and Ruth Cushing received one-year service "K's."

First Row: Hoadley; Cushing; Ditsch
Second Row: Martin; Curtis; Hamilton; Farley; Meehan

Congratulations . . .

AND AN INVITATION

- Seniors—accept our sincere congratulations. Graduation from such a fine school as Kenmore High School is something of which you may be forever proud. The fine influence of its splendid teachers has added something to your character which neither time nor misfortune can ever erase. Take with you our wishes for your unbounded success.

An Invitation . . .

P. S.—You might be interested to know that this book was produced in our plant. The sectional page inserts were printed by photo-lithography. Though a comparatively new process, photo-lithography has made a phenomenal rise in the graphic arts field in the last decade. If you would like to know more about this process we will be glad to show you our plant in action. You'll find both very interesting.
